

Ronjona's interests span history, the arts, nature, and yoga. She currently volunteers with a number of interest groups which includes heritage walkers in and around Delhi. She is also supporting the capital's drive towards recycling home waste, beginning with community awareness activities. In the evenings, when she isn't being a full-time mother, you can find her with her tablet fervently going through news websites. A former educationist, she taught history and English to middle school students. She lives in Delhi with her husband and begins each morning with a yoga class.