

Shilpiya's core belief is "If you love what you do, it shows in your work." To this end, her journey started with a B. Tech in Biotechnology, followed by an M. Tech in Medical Nanotechnology. Her passion for writing and creativity and her dream of working in the field of education helped her choose a less trodden path of training to be a writer, editor, and finally, an instructional designer.

Shilpiya is currently working as a Senior Design Manager at Emeritus. As an instructional designer, she helps design and curate engaging and meaningful learning journeys to help working professionals across the world upskill and be future-ready. She has designed high-quality courses for top schools in the world such as MIT Sloan, Wharton, Northwestern Kellogg, NUS Business School, and Columbia School of Business among others. She also trains and mentors instructional designers to be successful in their roles.
